Retired Suffolk County police commissioner honored

Suffolk County Legislator Sarah Anker (D-Mount Sinai) attended the Suffolk County Community College 32nd Annual Golf Classic on Aug. 24. The event, organized by the nonprofit Suffolk Community College Foundation, was held at the Hamlet Golf and Country Club in Commack and honored retired Suffolk County Police Commissioner John C. Gallagher.

"I am proud to honor John Gallagher for his service and dedication to Suffolk County," Anker said.

Gallagher headed the 12th largest urban police department in the nation, with over 2,800 officers under his command for seven years. Before his appointment as commissioner, Gallagher was the assistant deputy county executive from 1992 to 1997. He retired as commissioner in 2004, but has continued being an asset to the community through his service with the Red Cross.

The Suffolk Community College Foundation is a nonprofit organization, founded in 1989 to provide better access to higher education and foster success for Suffolk County's students. Proceeds from the event benefit student scholarships, emergency student loans and program development.
