31 Authors! Authors!

They're everywhere on SCCC's faculty, publishing pieces from A to Z: books of non-fiction on maritime history, Jewish culture, addiction, church and state, political opinion, nature; textbooks on child psychology, mathematics, science, business, HVAC; novels and books of poetry; a childhood memoir; translations of literature from the original Hungarian that have won international prizes; and scholarly articles galore. Several of these authors have been cited by The New York Times. One was a Critic's Choice in People magazine. One faculty poet is the winner of three Fulbright Awards that allowed him to teach in China and Yugoslavia.
