

During this disturbing time, we recognize the war in Ukraine might be directly impacting members of the college community significantly. Through the Center for Social Justice and Human Understanding and Mental Health & Wellness Services, we offer support to all those affected by the conflict. We stand united in our condemnation of violence and in our support for all people suffering as a result of it.

As a way to educate, create awareness, and stand in solidarity with the people directly impacted by this war, the Center for Social Justice and Human Understanding will be hosting “Why Ukraine: a Brief History” featuring Dr. Kristina Lucenko. A professor of writing and rhetoric at Stony Brook University, Dr. Lucenko is a Ukrainian-American who has written and researched extensively about the country and translated some of its leading poets into English. Her lecture will touch upon the troubled history of the region, as well as the lived experience of her family.

Please join us on Tuesday, March 8th at 9:30 am in the Southampton Building, Room 22, for this valuable and informative conversation. For more information, please contact the Center for Social Justice and Human Understanding at csjhu@sunysuffolk.edu.

If you are in need of emotional support during this challenging time, please reach out to our Mental Health & Wellness Services team by emailing mentalhealth@sunysuffolk.edu to schedule an appointment.
